PERSPECTIVES ON INDIA

Artificial shortage

Govt needs to make more telecom spectrum available laurels, the Congress should accept that MGNREGA is indeed an admission of other failures. And the government, instead of loudly claiming to have transformed the scheme, should instead worry about how it is going to transform agriculture, and render MGNREGA irrelevant.

he Telecom Regulatory Authority of India, or Trai, has stirred up a hornet's nest with its recommendation that the reserve price for very early on in life that, very often, where bank shares go the economy tends to follow.

If we apply this principle to India, then we should really be worried. Indian banks have been totally hampered, with most down between 35-50 per cent in the last 12 months alone. The markets seem so spooked by credit quality concerns that anyone with large corporate credit exposures has been smashed.
Just to give one a sense of how extreme this has now become, consider these data points. The entire public sector banking system (ex-State Bank of India) has a market capitalisation equal to Kotak Mahindra Bank. This is despite these banks having an asset base 30 times Kotak's. All the PSL banks together including access to the markets, until and unless we see greater
